IIHF Governance Review
• Transparency,
• Democratic Processes,
• Checks and Balances,
• Solidarity

• Ineffective EC with insufficient power to execute important functions (weak)

• Limitations
  • Lack of involvement from key stakeholders
  • Quantitative nature of research

Figure 2: Geeraert (2015a) Showing whether organisations have internal audit and ethics committees (n =35) and how competent they are.
BUILDING ON GEERAERT

• Stakeholder Typology – importance of relationships (Mitchell, Agle & Wood, 1997)
• Understanding stakeholders views a core activity (FRC, 2018)
• Hard / Soft Governance (GLFW, 2015)
• Sport Sector has its own set of characteristics

Culture → Code of Ethics → Ethics Committee

(De Waegeneer et al, 2016)
(Babiak & Wolfe, 2009)

“what’s going on this ice surface is untouched. And I said to everybody this, this is the Holy Grail. Ok. This you cannot touch, because as soon as you touch this, you lose the credibility”

“education, education, I can’t put that word often enough”

“the head of NBC? (...) came to visit (...) [and said], ‘we pay so much money…’, and you know what, you can offer all the money you want, we will say no. Because this goes against the game”

“I think you should disconnect it, don’t even call it a committee. You should have a special Board for that. And I think that they should report straight to the Congress”.

“We have Skoda 25 years (...) we have our fan group, our people, our family is a popular family?”

“I think you should disconnect it, don’t even call it a committee. You should have a special Board for that. And I think that they should report straight to the Congress”.

“to take people from let’s say sports and ethics studies, but who had never ever something to do with hockey, ooff, this will be a challenge”

“You know you’re so exposed, especially with social media and all that (...) but I think that’s where you put your personal integrity.”

“But the first thing I thought anyway you have to get involvement. Bottom up. You have to get the people that are going to do the work, they have to be involved.”

“that’s why I wanted to say to you maybe it’s a red wave and not a red line. A wave suggests that in some instances we can move the line a bit, depending on different circumstances, situations and cultures”
